

Princeton Speech-Language & Learning Center is pleased to announce an educational/information-based Parent Support Group

For parents of children and adolescents diagnosed with anxiety disorder, ADHD, communication difficulties, social skills deficits, or other special needs

Meet with other parents who are facing similar challenges and get support, information and strategies.

Led by Sharon Press, Ph.D | Licensed Psychologist | # NJSI03299

Mondays from 7:30 - 9:00 PM
October 12 through November 16, 2009

Topics will include:

- Understanding your child's social issues
- Behavior Management
- Executive Functioning - time management, organizational skills, decision-making skills
- Medication Issues
- Helping your child through school - transitioning issues and advocating for your child
- How Everyone in the Family is Affected

Dr. Press is a licensed psychologist in Princeton specializing in the treatment of children, adolescents and families. Dr. Press has worked with a wide variety of patients over the past 30 years. She has developed and implemented treatment programs for children with ADHD and their parents, children with bi-polar and their families, children of divorce, and children and teenagers with learning disabilities. Dr Press's expertise is in the differential diagnosis of complex disorders and the coordination and management of these disorders. This includes interfacing with psychiatrists, school systems, families, and communities, as well as helping parents understand and manage their children's struggles.

Fee: $225.00 (series of 3) each additional topic $75
(may be reimbursed by insurance)

Call Princeton Speech-Language & Learning Center at 609-924-7080 to register for the topics of interest to you (commitment/attendance to a minimum of 3 groups is required) Registration for the first topic must be done by October 7, 2009

